

Maida Vale Singers - Crits

Candide (Royal Festival Hall)

“Despite the embarrassment of riches in the cast, the star of the show was the Maida Vale Singers under Christopher Dee. At times subtle, at times explosive, they were simply mesmerizing, and the wall of sound they produced in the finalé made me glad to be alive.”

 Matthew Peacock – Opera Now

On The Town Again (Barbican Hall)

“Kim Criswell was supported with thespian enthusiasm by six soloists from the Maida Vale Singers”

* Hilary Finch – The London Times

Strictly Gershwin (Royal Albert Hall)

“The Gershwin melodies are dazzlingly played and sung by ENB’s orchestra, the Maida Vale Singers and the visiting queen of song, the celebrated Barbara Cook.”

* David Dougill – Sunday Times

MGM Musicals at The Proms (BBC Proms)

“Underpinned by spirited string playing, his juggernaut of an orchestra (John Wilson’s) — augmented by the Maida Vale Singers — combined rigour with an irrepressible element of swing”

* Clive Davis – The London Times

HMS Pinafore (BBC Proms)

“If only the principals’ diction was half as good as that of the chorus.” (Maida Vale Singers)

* BBC Website

Sondheim - Inside out (Queen Elizabeth Hall)

“It was a cast to die for. The Maida Vale Singers, a 16-strong group compiled from seasoned West End session performers, provided a mind-blowingly good back-up. And what a treat Stuart Matthew Price gave us when he stepped out of the Maida Vale Singers to solo ‘Beautiful Girls’ from Follies”.

 Jeremy Chapman – Musical Theatre Review

Hooray For Hollywood (BBC Proms)

“The chorus (Maida Vale Singers) got right inside the vintage Hollywood idiom. Four of them stepped up to the plate with party pieces of their own that rivalled the featured soloists.”

 David Mellor – Mail on Sunday

Sondheim at 75 including ‘Company’ (Hackney Empire)

“Every character was perfectly cast and performed”

 The Sondheim Society

Bali Ha’i from A Celebration of Rodgers & Hammerstein (BBC Proms)

“... the angelic chorus of the Maida Vale Singers, floating on after the song ended, lent an extra magic.”

 Ivan Hewett – The Telegraph

Danny Elfman’s music from the films of Tim Burton (Royal Albert Hall)

“It’s especially fascinating to see Elfman’s trademark sounds created live, with crashing drums and trumpets mingling with the haunting harmonies of the Maida Vale Singers.”

 Red Carpet News

Godspell (Lyric Theatre, Shaftesbury Avenue)

“A special mention should also go to the Maida Vale Singers who accompany throughout with their haunting backing vocals, and add beautifully to the atmosphere.”

 JM - So So Gay Website

Bernstein – Stage and Screen (BBC Proms)

“The Maida Vale Singers, always on-point with diction, made as much as it could of, for Lerner, quite ordinary lyrics. Edith Piaf said that she could “sing a phone book and make it sound good” – the members of the Maida Vale Singers showed similar fortitude.”

 Classical Source

Bernstein – Stage and Screen (BBC Proms)

“Imagine a Robeson like Bass voice arching poignantly through the octaves of ‘I Feel Like I’m Not Out Of Bed Yet’, the opening of On The Town. That was how this evening of Leonard Bernstein’s stage and screen music, given by John Wilson and his Orchestra, was launched. The singer was the Jamaican born Robert Winslade Anderson; that he’s actually a member of the Maida Vale Singers tells you something about the quality of Wilson’s hand-picked forces.”

 The Standard

John Wilson Orchestral Tour (Birmingham, Symphony Hall)

“The John Wilson Orchestra is on tour all over the country with a brand-new tribute to the great MGM musicals. This year the Maida Vale Singers, has joined up, and its contribution is first-class. When, at the end of Wilson’s tribute to the father of American operetta, Sig Romberg, the chorus sang ‘When I Grow Too Old To Dream’, it was hankie time for me.”

 David Mellor – Mail on Sunday